Hi Liz, no real red flags, but this comment made by FAA is interesting. It basically questions whether the alignment modification is still consistent with the City Council resolution. The City says it is, but has anyone asked the City Council? I guess it could be an issue if the City Council chose to complain.

		1	City Council Resolution 08-261 passed on January 28, 2009, to support the Airport Alternative predates the decision to refine the rail alignment near the airport. A question whether the resolution is broad enough to include the refinement or if it is specific to a particular route may be brought up. FAA notes that although this item falls under the City's purview, the City may want to consider whether additional information on this item should be included in the document.	Souki		Yes, the Resolution is broad enough. The MOS defined in Resolution. 08-261 near HNL is defined as "to Aolele Street serving the Airport, to Dillingham Boulevard[.]" With the refinement to the Airport Alternative, the guideway still goes to Aolele Street serving the Airport, transitioning to Ualena Street for a short distance, to Dillingham Boulevard.

According to the matrix, the City accommodated the other requests.

Subject: Attachments for Honolulu meeting

All –

I am not sure if these went through earlier. These are the attachments I intended to send. I am revising the document "comments on the admin FEIS.doc" to reflect our conversation. The other attachments are comments made by cooperating agencies and the City's responses addressing those comments. I received them last night from Faith, but have not reviewed them yet.

Ted, could you let us know if there are any red flags?

Thanks,

Liz
